Jeff: We identify students that are below grade level and are able to provide them, through our AmeriCorps service members, supplemental instruction, helping them get back on track.

Jeff: When we look at our region in the Sacramento literacy map, we see that almost 50% of students in the community are below reading proficiency.

We're still engaging, but now through a virtual classroom, as opposed to a physical classroom.

Jeff: So we're just using technology to deliver the same type of service that we would do even on a physical space.

City Year's model is to focus on the whole child.

Jeff: So our Corps members are directly engaging with students, building up their social and emotional skillsets, overcoming trauma that they're going through, building up their confidence.

And what that does is open the gate for the academic support.

Jeff: So the Golden 1 Credit Union literacy grant not only helps us support that work in the classroom with our students, but it's enabling almost 70 student success coaches to be deployed here in schools across our community that need it the most.
